

What Poetry Cannot Accomplish

I dream words will walk me through walls,

trick the devil
into jumping the cliff,

transform pigs to pearls.

Instead, I have no comforting words, but a sad end of broken nets and pecking birds.

Words like a bullet
flee death,

but always return
to the barrel.